LAST WEEK TO REGISTER!

The University of Arizona Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) will hold its fourth annual professional development conference, Intersections 2008: Living, Learning & Working and it will take place on Thursday, November 6, 2008 on campus at the Memorial Student Union Ballroom. This conference is open to all employees of the University of Arizona. Participants will gain access to useful information and resources that facilitate professional development within their current positions, and as they seek career advancement.

Five 75-minute workshops will feature individuals who are experts on topics important to UA employees. Attendees will choose two workshops that provide information and demonstrations relating to Finances, Development Plans, Effective Communication, Personal Development, and Overall Wellbeing.

Intersections 2008 is scheduled from 7:30am to 2:30pm and includes a continental breakfast and a buffet luncheon. During lunch, the CSW 2008 Vision Awards will be presented to a UA employee (or employees) nominated by the UA community at-large, who exemplify characteristics of leadership essential to the achievement of CSW goals. With our conference welcome by Adrian Shelton, our keynote by Robyn Austin, and our plenary session presented by Allison Vaillancourt, this conference promises to be energetic and inspiring.

As a learning community, we must remain committed to the professional development of all community members. The Intersections 2008 conference offers an effective, low-cost opportunity that benefits individuals and the institution. It is also an excellent utilization of the 16-hour professional development leave policy that was instituted to benefit all UA personnel. I urge all supervisors to support their classified staff's participation in this event.

Conference participation is limited to 200. Registration will close November 3, 2008. This is the last week of registration. Conference details and registration information are available online at www.csw.arizona.edu/intersections2008. For additional information, please contact Cynthia Malbrough at 621-1491 or the Diversity Resource Office at 626-5502.
